KÆRE MEDLEM

Det er er sommerferie for mange mennesker netop nu, og måske er du en af dem der stadig nyder at holde lidt fri. I så fald kan du tage dette Outturn med ud på terrassen sammen med en passende dram, og kigge lidt på hvad du har mulighed for at smage på i August.

Vi tager turen rundt på alle lokationer i August til en omgang casual days. Du booker som sædvanligt plads på dit favorit stamsted på smws.dk under smagninger. Det plejer at være hyggeligt, og jeg håber at vi ses til en snak og en sensommer-dram.

Kigger vi frem mod september, så er der Gathering oplevelser i vente i København, Grenaa, Esbjerg, Aarhus og Aalborg. I København har vi hovedeventet der løber fra fredag til og med lørdag og de 3 sidstnævnte byer byder på en ganske særlig smagning. Du kan læse meget mere, samt booke billet på smws.dk. Forhåbentlig ses vi til en kort pause i hverdagen i september.

Skulle du have lyst til det helt store eventyr, så er billetterne til den 11. SMWS Festival i Danmark til salg. Festivalen er det største event i vi har i Danmark, og stedet hvor medlemmer mødes fra alle hjørner af landet. Festivalen finder sted i Vejle fra den 3. til og med den 6. februar næste år. Smagninger til Festivalen sættes til salg søndag den 4. oktober kl. 19.00 – så sørg for at sikre dig billet til de dage du ønsker at deltage inden da.

På gensyn i August og fortsat god sommer.

Med venlig hilsen,

Thomas Korsgaard

On the nose, a gentle wisp of chalky smoke rose above golden barley sugars and crusty sourdough. Then, peanut brittle and ripe bananas met glazed hot cross buns and poppy seeds, with bursts of lemon and pear. The palate offered flavours of sweet pipe tobacco and a wooden spice box filled with cardamom, cumin and turmeric. A thick, mouth-coating texture carried notes of juicy plums, melon and fudge-laced butter, before a warm finish of salty mace and fennel. With water, things relaxed into fresh hedgerows and butter biscuits drizzled with salted caramel, toasted nuts and honeyed cornflakes. A further sip revealed raspberries and lily pollen, boiled citrus sweets and a wave of wood spice and berries right to the end, for an easy-going, session dram.

On the nose, honey, toffee and runny caramel, chocolate and coconut were balanced by key lime pie, apricot and dried flowers in a basket. Immediately sweet on the palate, we found glazed doughnuts, marzipan and gummy bears but, given time, additional subtle themes emerged – perfumed wood, gorse, Seville oranges and coffee grounds. As we approached the reduced nose we could imagine eating cherries, sipping lemonade and making daisy chains in a summer meadow. That summertime theme continued on the palate – with lavender, honey, melon and sherbet lemons – before a delicate trace of pink grapefruit and pink peppercorns to finish.

The descriptors came thick and fast – earthy honey on toast, eucalyptus balm, polished leather and marmalade, as well as fresh raspberries and blueberries in a wooden bowl. The neat taste was just as appealing, delivering toasted marshmallows, chocolate-covered marzipan, amarena cherries in syrup and, in the finish, notes of vanilla and coconut. After reduction we dined on boozy black forest cupcakes or slices of coffee liqueur cheesecake with a fondant-filled cocoa biscuit crust. On the palate, we tucked into mousse au chocolat and a hot chocolate with cherry amaretto-soaked marshmallows. This was a whisky with which to sit back and relax. Following six years in an ex-bourbon hogshead, we transferred this into a second fill oloroso hogshead.

A sparkler fizzed in the darkness, illuminating dates, fig rolls and chocolate truffles obscured in the shadow of leather-bound books and heavy walnut cake. Loose-leaf tea and strawberry liqueur then blended with Spanish brandy and coffee to create an intense and brooding concoction. The palate, meanwhile, turned deeper. Fizzy apple juice now met coal dust, liquorice and caramelised sugar within a brooding cloud of cocoa powder. A drop of water revealed the hush of a church library, candied chestnuts tumbling in a sea of melted butter against the rows of old books. The finish lured us to delve further, as flickering candlelight danced over chocolate orange, marmalade, and rum and raisin ice cream.

The nose was primarily sweet and attractive, with honey and spun sugar, canned peaches, lemon puffs and a pâtisserie counter, plus a wink of straw and a nod of rolled oats. The palate was fruit-laden, giving us apple, pineapple, stone fruits and lemon drops, shortbread, vanilla fudge and gelato fior di latte, ahead of a cinnamon, pickled ginger and black pepper kick in the tail. On the reduced nose, citrus was elevated and joined by sugared almonds and flower meadows. The palate was now a very satisfying combination of fruity confectional sweetness, chocolate granola and subtle nods and winks of ginger and oak.

The Panel found this absolutely delightful, with an almost perfect balance between smoky and fruity aromas, yet at the same time delivering salty and maritime characteristics. Imagine grilled fruit skewers with lobster pieces next to a seafood and chorizo paella. On the palate we had a barbecued fruit kebab with a honey mustard sauce and a seared scallop burger with smoked bacon and a squeeze of fresh lemon juice. The melt-in-your-mouth texture had one Panellist declaring: "I'm in heaven". After reduction we grilled mixed berries with lemon and thyme, while to taste a hot-smoked tuna niçoise made it the ultimate union of umami. Following six years in an ex-bourbon hogshead, we transferred this whisky into a first fill American oak oloroso hogshead.

A freshly painted tugboat chugged through a salty mist of lavender and heather honey, its tarry docking ropes afixed near a brimming engine lubricated with fruity olive oil. The captain's oral assessment proclaimed rich, smoked honey, coal dust, an unlit cigar and menthol cough sweets, alongside our cargo of barbecued lemon, raspberry fruit pastilles, cherries soaked in booze, grape skins and opulent heather honey-glazed lobster. Agua infusion unveiled whiffs of earthy dunnage, eucalyptus, a sea breeze and clay pots. As we turned for shore, sweet chilli langoustines danced on the palate with maury sweet wine, while charred staves, a smoked oyster emulsion, peppermint tea and dried baking spices comforted the crew until home's warm embrace. This whisky was filled into a #4 char second fill puncheon until it was transferred into an ex-oloroso puncheon at the age of 16.

Briny, that was the common denominator on the neat nose, next to thick peat smoke. We got tinned tuna, gherkins, olives, creosote, tar, antiseptic, metal polish ... you name it, we managed to find it in this sample. The taste felt like a whole packet of menthol cigarettes was burning as we tried to douse the fire with smoky pickleback shots. Following reduction, we got a bag of fish and chips wrapped in yesterday's newspaper and splashed with oil and vinegar next to salty, smoky, sweet popcorn. On the palate – a little restrained, if that was possible – we found freshly tarred roads, dried seaweed, salty peanuts and, in the finish, smoky wasabi.
