KÆRE MEDLEM

1983 var et særligt år. Det var året da Scotch Malt Whisky Society blev stiftet i Edinburgh af Philip Hills og en håndfuld ligesindede whisky entusiaster.

Her 35 år efter finder vi medlemmer overalt på kloden, og ikke mindst i Danmark, hvor det har været muligt at smage de dejlige dråber siden 2012.

Som en del af fejringen af jubilæet, er der blevet aftappet nogle (efterhånden) virkelig sjældne perler, og heldigvis er det lykket også at få fat i nogle af dem til de danske medlemmer. Flaskerne kan du finde i dette Outturn, og bliver sat til salg fredag den 7. september kl. 12.00.

Husk også muligheden for at deltage i 35 års jubilæums smagningen hjemmefra, eventuelt sammen med en flok gode venner, mandag den 24. september kl. 20.00. Smagningen afholdes af John McCheyne, og streames live via Facebook til en lang række lande. I skrivende stund vil der i hvert fald være deltagelse fra 174 danske medlemmer, det er faktisk rigtig flot!

Her fra Danmark ønskes et hjerteligt tillykke med jubilæet, og hæver vore glas for de næste 35 år.

God fornøjelse med læsningen.

Thomas Korsgaard
Manager, SMWS Denmark.

The panel found themselves in a bakery, their nostrils flaring to the scents of key lime pie and lemon cheesecake with further notes of pineapple chunks, cream of tartar, white chocolate, wet moss and agave syrup. A little water revealed green fruits, camphor, wet dog, ripe pear, starfruit, kiwi and lime cordial. With a little time further notes of carnation, hot cross bun, cookie dough and burnt currants all emerged. The palate we found a curious mix of fruit pastilles, lozenges, cactus, sauteed bamboo, cinnamon bark, bell pepper and chilli oil. With water bringing a more easy going green fruit quality and various notes of foam shrimps, sesame, sunflower oil, dolly mixtures, mandarin liqueur and curry leaf.

A real sense of autumn on the nose neat with plenty of nuts (almonds, hazelnuts), acorns, rich damp earth, winter fruit chutney as well as rhubarb, cinnamon and custard tarts. Initially on the palate neat intense warm toasted oak spices, followed by orange-clove pomander balls, treacle sponge pudding and dark rich honey with a hint of smoky coffee. A subtle savoury note of smoked venison appeared when adding water next to caramelized coconut chips and homemade crunchy nutty granola. Silky smooth to taste, chilled berries (raspberries, strawberries and blueberries) with a white hot chocolate sauce – elegance of perfection!

The first thing of note was the antique brass colour as well as the wonderful beads that formed in a perfect circle when poured into a glass. The aromas of ripe mangos, apple pie, custard, as well as a dandelion and burdock cake were all very delicate. On the palate sweet, perfumed and aromatic, a tropical take on a Pavlova; palm-sugar meringue, grilled pineapple, coconut flavoured cream and a granita of mango, passionfruit and lime. The tiniest drop of water and we moved into an ancient cellar where dusty old wine bottles were stored and to drink now like a vintage sauternes; unctuous, sweet, creamy and complex with a remarkably fresh finish.

We released the marmalade-tinged tincture from the bottle with the reverence it duly deserved and waited with great expectation. A rather shy introduction greeted us with ripe mandarin and baked bananas. Slowly, slowly, the aromas unfolded like an archaeologist brushing dust from an ancient relic. Stratified layers of melted butter and pecans sat above overripe dessert apple and leather polish. The hands of the clock continued to turn as our patience was rewarded with the appearance of sage and thyme that seamlessly merged into eucalyptus, nutmeg and cloves. Everything began to swirl in perfect harmony as a soft and viscous palate coated the mouth with oily orange skin. A vibrant tang from fresh pineapple and thick cut marmalade brought with it a vitality that aligned with pink pickled ginger on a finish of old oak and physallis. After spending 27 years in an ex-oloroso butt this was transferred to a 1st fill PX butt for the

The deep golden red brown colour of a Tiger's eye gemstone gave a good indication of what lay in store for us. Wow – what a nose! Dark moist brandied fruit cake, Maraschino cherries and raisins soaked in rum, and the overall impression was like loading and firing an 18th century musket. Tasted straight it felt more like firing a 32 pounder naval canon from the lower gun deck of a first-rate ship; frightful, big, dry, woody and plenty of tannins but all in a balanced harmony. Water brought out oily and slightly salty notes combined with iron rust and the mouthfeel was now viscous, thick and chewy with the bitterness of coffee beans and a dry medicinal finish.

A sweet-talking, charmer of a dram that exuded sticky jelly sweets rolled in hazelnuts and nutmeg. Sugar laden intonations extended into orange and lime marmalade with apricots in syrup and a substantial wedge of sticky toffee pudding. Layered delicately over the sweetness came floral notes of pot pourri and Turkish delight that harmonised with a weighty spice that travelled in the form of cardamom pods and spiced aubergine pickle. Herbal hues characterised thick and viscous cough mixture that imparted onto the palate a glorious texture that combined most elegantly with a peppery tingle. Runny honey oozed over tinned fruit cocktail and parma violets before assuming a nutty stance that echoed earthy connotations. The finish concluded in a sweet and woody fashion, leaving behind reverberations of dried herbs.

A spellbinding and classical nose of lime juice, passion fruit sours, cherry tunes, menthol, eucalyptus resin, cinnamon balls, aniseed bark and an antique writing desk complete with ink well. Water adds extra layers of complexity with notes of coal dust, copper coins, sourdough starter, lemon rind, spearmint, smouldering herbs on a BBQ and a face-in-kiln-style peat smoke with a mezcal-esque briny twist in the middle. The delivery in the mouth is undulating and exquisite. Tropical fruit chutney with coal tar soap, peat embers, blue cheese, salted cod, key lime pie and smoked grains. With reduction; Lapsang Souchong, clove rock, barley sugar, cured meat, pickled damsons and charred sugarcane. Quite a ride!

This Cognac was distilled in a wood fired still and shows notes of pumpernickel bread, sourdough and toasted seeds on the nose at first. Followed by brioche, freshly churned butter, hessian and warm cereals. With time there is also a light and elegant green fruitiness. With water we get camphor, jelly babies, icing sugar and caraway. The palate is powerful and filled with notes of tar liqueur, white stone fruits, mead, quince paste and hawthorne. Water brings grated nutmeg, olive oil, bracken and mineral oil. An elegant earthiness emerges in the finish. Fresh pineapple and thick cut marmalade brought with it a vitality that aligned with pink pickled ginger on a finish of old oak and physalis.
